

Revisiting the Dream: A Community Conversation on Race, Social Responsibility, and the Value of Black Life

Monday Jan. 19

7-9 p.m.

Spady Cultural Heritage Museum

170 Northwest
5th Avenue
Delray Beach, FL

The Dept. of Curriculum Culture and Educational Inquiry in the College of Education at FAU & Spady Cultural Heritage Museum will host a panel discussion and community forum titled:

Revisiting the Dream: A Community Conversation on Race, Social Responsibility, and the Value of Black Life.

This forum is designed to support open dialogue that focuses on increased violence (specifically on young Black men), individual and collective responsibility, and current racial tensions in communities of color.

The goal of the community dialogue is to facilitate community building by creating an environment where conversation can provoke social activism and encourage community responsibility. This exchange of ideas is aimed at:

- Articulating the needs of our diverse communities
- Bridging the gap between activists, academics, politicians, and community
- Devising a plan of action to ensure that our communities are equipped for increasingly uncertain racial climates

We are urging members of the local communities to join us as we engage in critical dialogue that will lead to positive action.
